

No Art Teacher?

Don't have an Art Teachers on staff? Artwork is created in the individual classrooms instead of during an art class? Here is the solution ...

Just 15-20 minutes a day

Typically, if artwork is to be done in the classrooms, homeroom teachers set aside a 15-20 minute period each day for one week when students may create their artwork. Declaring an "Art Awareness Week" at the school ties in nicely with this dedicated time period for creating the artworks. Another great time to allow for creation of the artwork is during "Spirit Week." Usually a second week is set aside for those students who were out during the first week or need to finish their masterpieces.

Additional artwork subject matter

The subject matter may reflect what the students are studying in history, science or literature. It's easiest if each grade level has the same subject matter. Some examples:

- 1st Graders may be studying Earth Science – oceans, fish and sea life or classifying animals into groups (marine, mammals, etc.) may be good topics.
- 3rd Graders may be covering Ecology – rain forest ecosystem, habitats and animals may be a good direction.
- 4th Graders may be studying your state's history, the role of industry and settlement in Social Studies – a historic event or person from your state may be the subject. Perhaps, a self-portrait dressed as a child of a specific era in your state's history will be of interest
- 6th Graders may be covering Earth Science – oceans and marine life, weather and climate, our solar system, stars and galaxies make great subject matter.
